Danny Webber's background

Danny is a retired professional football, who now works regularly as a pundit and co-commentator for BBC Sport, Sky Sports and Manchester United TV along with regular appearances on ITV Sport and talkSPORT.

Born in Manchester, Danny went on to play for his home team United from 1998 to 2003; he started out as a trainee and after scoring 16 goals in 11 appearances he was offered a professional contract.

After a loan spell at Watford, he joined them on a permanent basis for two years before moving to Sheffield United for the second half of the 2004/05 season. Whilst there, his goals helped them gain promotion to the Premier League in 2006.

Over the next few years Danny played for a number of teams, including Portsmouth, Leeds United, Doncaster Rovers and Accrington Stanley before joining Salford City in 2014. He helped the side to win the Northern Premier League Division One North title in 2014.

Danny only joined Salford after turning up at Moor Lane to commentate for BBC Radio Manchester. At half-time he was spotted by his old team mates - The Class of '92 - who persuaded him to get his boots on for the second half!

Outside of his media work, he uses his experience and knowledge of the game to work as a football agent and currently has an impressive portfolio of young talent. He is the CEO and founder of Autograph Sports Management, a Sports & Commercial Agency specialising in player representation and building brands.
