

Spriha Srivastava

Insider's London Bureau Chief and International Executive Editor

Spriha Srivastava is Insider's London Bureau Chief and the International Executive Editor for the business division. Spriha oversees the UK and Singapore newsrooms and is heavily involved in mentoring, coaching and training new talent.

Spriha's biography

About Spriha Srivastava

Spriha Srivastava regularly speaks at events, moderates panels and is very passionate about topics such as women in leadership, future of work and diversity.

Spriha has been a journalist for over a decade and half and has been involved in the coverage of big events such as the after-effects of the global financial crisis, Brexit, U.S. elections and Donald Trump's presidency, coronavirus pandemic and its impact across the world.

Prior to joining Insider, Spriha was the Deputy Digital News Editor for CNBC International in London. She helped manage a team of reporters for CNBC.com and regularly wrote and edited market-moving, fast-paced business news stories.

In the past, Spriha has worked at the Financial Times' Money Management magazine covering personal finance, where she won an award for her work. Prior to that, she was at Thomson Reuters where she was one of the moderators for Global Markets Forum, a 24x7 live forum for traders and market professionals.

Spriha has won a number of awards for her work. In 2015, Spriha won a runner up in newcomer of the year category in Santander Media Awards. In July 2020, Spriha won Women Economic Forum's "Iconic Women Creating A Better Tomorrow" award.

In September 2020, Spriha was also shortlisted for the Asian Women of Achievement Award in the media category. Spriha was recently also included as one of the Top 50 leaders in the UK recognized for kindness in leadership.

In her spare time, Spriha loves to travel around the world and has been to over 40 countries.

